

warmth and elegance for Parisian offices

(Paris, France)

In the heart of Paris, on the top floor of a building, these new offices are inspired by the image of an artist's loft: raw materials (wood, unpolished stone, polished concrete), generous natural light (large glass roofs have been installed) and furniture inspired by industrial design. Three focal points have been defined. The personal offices feature comfortable, dynamic lighting, with light tones that change according to the rhythm of the employees and the time of day. In the living areas, lively lights have been installed, notably in the form of large backlit panels with a marbled effect. In the open-space areas, personal lighting fixtures have been installed for each employee, taking advantage of the generous amount of natural light. © ???

contracting authority
confidential client
architecte
Gensler

delivery date 2025
lighting designer
les éclairieurs