

Rehabilitation of Hotel Bouchu d'Esterno

(Dijon, France)

Destined to become the headquarters of the International Organisation of Vine and Wine, the Hôtel Bouchu d'Esterno, a listed historic monument, is being renovated to offer work and meeting spaces. The architectural project aims to restore the reading of the historical envelope of the building and to enhance its remarkable elements, interior and exterior. In this perspective, the lighting of the building reveals the heritage elements of the facades - openings, alcoves, columns - and the decorative elements such as the cherubs, the stone portal, the fire pots. The garden benefits from a delicate and calm lighting, able to adapt to the different events proposed. Finally, the interior spaces of the building are enhanced by lighting adapted to the different spaces. The lighting is carefully designed to participate in the exterior vision of the building.
