

a new forest for the Part-Dieu financial district

(Lyon, France)

In the heart of the Part-Dieu business district, Bois Bouchut brings a new presence of nature and life. Designed as a space that breaks with its mineral environment, this pocket forest creates a new ecosystem between the towers, offering places to pause and enjoy the fresh air among the trees. To mark the differentiation between spaces, an original lighting fixture was designed, extending the existing typological language. Mounted on poles shaped like assembled wooden elements, the lighting is provided by a functional low platform and an ambient section above. The latter takes the form of lanterns, with a mask featuring plant motifs and a warm light temperature of around 2400K. The orange colours thus create an environmentally friendly setting reminiscent of soft, domestic atmospheres. © Guillaume Perret contracting authority SPL Lyon Part-Dieu

landscape designer
Atelier Jacqueline Osty
engineer
Ingérop
consultation committee
Trait Clair

global budget
2 500 000€ €VAT
competition
2023
delivery
2025
lighting designer
les éclairieurs