

A music school in a former wine hall

(Gray, France)

A covered hall and a music school are housed in an ancient building in the heart of the block. The project aims to reveal the original structure of this former wine hall, and to give it a new meaning in the public space. The hall becomes a large volume bathed in light, with the play of light points coming from the roof and chandeliers animating the entire space, particularly the roof structure. The whole complex finds a place in the night-time space of the heart of the town; the light participates in the reading of the new identity of this renovated building.
